PLAYOFF NOTE-A-BULLS

The Celtics have now won all five playoff series they have played against the Bulls.

Game 6 was mostly won at the 3-point line. Boston shot 16-of-39 (.410) while Chicago finished 4-of-19 (.211). For the series, the Celtics made 76 3-pointers to the Bulls' 42. The Bulls shot 29.8 percent from distance for the series.

Boston shot 23-of-23 from the foul line in Game 5, only the seventh time in NBA Playoff history that a team shot 23-of-23 or better from the line (last by San Antonio on May 10, 2014, 25-of-25).

Dwyane Wade logged his 23rd career postseason double-double in Game 5 on April 26, and is one shy of joining the top-10 list of most playoff double-doubles in league history. Wade is ranked fourth among active players (Chris Paul 40, Rajon Rondo 38 and Russell Westbrook 33).

The Celtics' Game 4 win marked the fourth straight time this series the road team has won. The last time this happened in the league was in 2005 between the Mavericks and Rockets. (ESPN Stats & Info)

Dwyane Wade logged 26 points for Chicago on April 23. He now has 144 career playoff games with at least 15 points, which is good for 11th all-time. He is three games away from tying Magic Johnson and joining the top ten.

Jimmy Butler made 19 free throws in Game 4 on April 23 after not attempting any in Game 3. The last player in the NBA to make at least 19 free throws one game after not making any was Dwight Howard in March 2013. (STATS)

The Bulls shot 15-of-15 from the foul line in the defeat on April 21, marking just the second time in team playoff history that Chicago shot perfect from the stripe with at least 15 attempts (May 19, 1992, 19-of-19 vs. Cleveland).

Boston's 34 assists in Game 3 were the most allowed by the Bulls in a playoff game since Game 5 of the 1989 Eastern Conference semifinals vs. New York (35).

The Celtics' 17 3-pointers in Game 3 on April 21 were the most the Bulls have ever allowed in a playoff game.

Robin Lopez was an inside force for the Bulls this series, shooting 34-of-52 (.654) from the field.

Jimmy Butler finished with 14 points and seven rebounds in 38 minutes in Game 3. Butler did not make a trip to the foul line, just the fifth time in his career (regular season or playoffs) that he played 38+ minutes without a free throw attempt.

Fred Hoiberg became the fifth coach in NBA history to have his first two career playoff victories both come on the road (1969: George Lee, San Francisco; 1993: Randy Pfund, Los Angeles Lakers; 1996: Jeff Van Gundy, New York Knicks; 2014: Randy Wittman, Washington Wizards).

In Game 2, Rajon Rondo finished with 11 points, nine rebounds, 14 assists and five steals. He tied the Bulls franchise record for most assists in a playoff game. Additionally, according to Elias, Rondo became the second player in Bulls history – along with Michael Jordan – to post 10 assists and five steals in a playoff game.

At home in the playoffs, the Bulls hold an all-time postseason record of 121-51 (.703) – fourth among existing NBA franchises (Los Angeles Lakers: 286-96, .749; Miami Heat: 83-32, .722; Boston Celtics: 232-92, .716). On the road in the playoffs, the Bulls own an all-time postseason record of 65-106 (.380) – sixth-best in the NBA.

On Sunday, April 16, the Bulls set a new franchise playoff record for most offensive rebounds in a half with 16 in the first half vs. Boston.

Chicago sought to use its combination of vast playoff experience and youthful energy this postseason. Among players who have averaged at least 12 minutes per game on the current rosters of this year's 16 playoff teams, Chicago's average age of 26.2 is the youngest of the remaining playoff teams.

PLAYOFF PREVAIL The Chicago Bulls will return to the playoffs after missing last year's postseason for the first time since 2007-08. Prior to 2015-16, the Bulls had made seven consecutive trips to the NBA Playoffs, including 10 out of the last 11 seasons.
