

BASKETBALL OPERATIONS

Jeff Bower General Manager

Jeff Bower's versatility has been an invaluable asset to the Hornets' basketball staff during his 14-plus seasons with the club. As the team's general manager, he handles all day-to-day basketball operations and oversees player personnel decisions, the coordination of schedules for the entire scouting staff, and the compilation of data in preparation for the NBA Draft.

The 2007-08 Hornets squad set a franchise record with 56 wins, representing the culmination of Bower's efforts to rebuild the team following the 2004-05 season. The Hornets have completed a 38-game turnaround in just three seasons under his direction. The current record-setting roster was formed when Bower was able to keep certain pieces that were key to the Hornets' previous success and combine them with new additions that he felt the team needed to reach the next level.

Bower's first season as general manager (2005-06) resulted in a 20-win improvement over the previous season (best in the NBA). That success fueled him to build on the team's momentum and overhaul the roster for the 2006-07 campaign. Through an intricate series of moves on both a large and small scale, a new and improved roster was formed (including free agents Peja Stojakovic and Jannero Pargo and trade acquisition Tyson Chandler) and the Hornets had completed their busiest and most exciting offseason in franchise history. Perhaps most impressive of all was the fact that Bower was able to accomplish his goals, fill the desired roster spots and add the exact players he targeted while keeping the team under the salary cap. Despite being hit with a slew of injuries (Stojakovic missed 69 games, Chris Paul missed 18 games, David West missed 30 games and Jackson missed 26 games), Bower's 2006-07 Hornets were still able to exceed the previous season's win total and were in contention for a playoff spot until the final week of the regular season.

Bower began his tenure with the Hornets as an advance scout from 1995 to 1997 before earning a promotion as the team's director of scouting (where he served from the 1997-98 season through 1999-00). In addition to his scouting duties during the 1998-99 season, Bower joined the coaching ranks as an assistant after Paul Silas was named interim head coach on March 7, 1999 (and helped him lead the Hornets to a 22-13 record). He was named assistant general manager for the 2000-01 season. On June 4, 2001, Bower was promoted to general manager (under then-Vice President of Basketball Operations Bob Bass) and held that position through the 2002-03 season. He returned to the bench as an assistant coach under Tim Floyd in 2003-04 before returning to the front office as director of player personnel in 2004-05. Bower's years of experience working at all levels in the Hornets' basketball operations department culminated with his appointment to the current post of general manager just prior to the start of the team's 2005-06 training camp.

Prior to joining the Hornets, Bower enjoyed an impressive career at the collegiate level. He spent three years as an assistant coach at Penn State University from 1983-86 before moving to Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. After first serving as an assistant coach from 1986 through 1990, he was promoted to associate head coach, a position he held for five years. Bower helped lead the Red Foxes to an NCAA Tournament appearance in 1987 after winning the Northeast Conference. He also coached former Indiana Pacers center Rik Smits, the second overall pick in the 1988 NBA Draft, for two years during his time at Marist.

In addition to his college and NBA accolades, Bower was a three-time guest of the International Basketball Academy held in Pula, Croatia, where he gave coaching clinics and provided instruction to players.

The native of Hollidaysburg, Penn., and his wife, Lisa, have a daughter, Lindsey (born in January 2003). Bower holds a bachelor's degree in history/education from St. Francis College in Pennsylvania.

Byron Scott Head Coach

As head coach of the Hornets for the last four seasons, Byron Scott has led the team through a complete restructuring, an unprecedented two-year run playing for two cities due to a horrific natural disaster and a staggering rash of injuries to the greatest season in Hornets history. In fighting through obstacles, he has instilled the team with the tenacity and mental toughness that helped him reach eight NBA Finals (and win three NBA titles) as a player and coach and garner 2007-08 Coach of the Year award.

Scott exceeded all expectations other than his own in the 2007-08 season after leading the team to a franchise record 56 wins and establishing the Hornets as one of the elite teams in the ultra-competitive Western Conference. The Hornets' team success translated into individual honors for Scott, as he was named head coach of the Western Conference All-Star Team (making him one of just six coaches to man the sidelines for both conferences) and Western Conference Coach of the Month for January (making him just the eighth coach in NBA history to earn Coach of the Month honors in both conferences). Along the way, Scott led the Hornets to the second-best road record (26-15) in the Western Conference and the second-most wins (34) against the Western Conference of any team in the NBA. They also eclipsed last season's win total on March 3.

Scott's first season as head coach saw the team post an 18-64 mark after the decision was made to restructure the team and look toward the future. Scott's second season on the bench was perhaps his most satisfying as a head coach. Just prior to the start of training camp, the team was displaced from its New Orleans home by Hurricane Katrina and landed in Oklahoma City. He would lead the team from the sidelines in four different home arenas and still manage to guide them to a 38-44 record. The 20-game turnaround was the best in the NBA that season, leading to Scott finishing fifth in NBA Coach of the Year balloting. The 2006-07 season began with high expectations and huge promise, but a slew of injuries hampered the Hornets' drive for a playoff spot. The team lost 196 player games due to injury but still managed to stay in contention for the postseason until the final week of the regular season.

Scott came to the Hornets after three-and-a-half seasons in New Jersey, during which time he compiled a 149-139 (.517) record and took the Nets from the bottom of the Eastern Conference (only three teams were worse the season before he arrived) to one of the NBA's elite teams.

He posted a 26-56 mark in his first year with the Nets (2000-01), but guided them to a 52-30 record and a trip to the NBA Finals in the 2001-02 season (just his second as a head coach at any level). The 52 wins were a Nets franchise record and represented the sixth-best turnaround (26 games) in NBA history. The team enjoyed several other franchise firsts, including the Atlantic Division title, the best record in the Eastern Conference and a 50-win season. For his efforts, Scott was named head coach of the Eastern Conference All-Star Team during the 2002 All-Star Game in Philadelphia.

Under Scott's leadership, the Nets finished 49-33 and returned to the Finals in 2002-03. The team captured its second consecutive Atlantic Division crown and once again rolled through the playoffs. After losing the first two games of their Finals matchup with the Spurs, Scott led the Nets back with two consecutive wins to tie the series before they eventually lost in six games.

Prior to joining the Nets, Scott spent two seasons (1998-99 and 1999-00) as an assistant coach with the Sacramento Kings. During his two years in Sacramento, the team posted their first back-to-back winning seasons (27-23 and 44-38) in 20 years. Scott's responsibilities with the Kings included reviewing offensive game plans, advance scouting and individual skill work with perimeter players.

Scott began his coaching career after 14 years as a player in the NBA with Los Angeles (1983-93, 1996-97), Indiana (1993-95) and Vancouver (1995-96). Scott, who holds career averages of 14.1 points, 2.8 rebounds and 2.5 assists, won three NBA championships (1985, 1987, 1988) as a key member of the Lakers' "Showtime" era. He experienced only two losing seasons as a player and his teams qualified for the playoffs in 13 of his 14 seasons. His 183 career playoff games ranks seventh all-time behind Kareem Abdul-Jabaar, Scottie Pippen, Danny Ainge, Magic Johnson, Robert Parish and Karl Malone. His best season came during the Lakers' 1988 championship run, when he averaged 21.7 points, 4.1 rebounds and 4.1 assists. After spending his 14th and final NBA season with the Lakers, Scott played one season in Greece for Panathinaikos, where he led the team to a championship.

Scott entered the NBA as the fourth overall selection in the 1983 NBA Draft by the San Diego Clippers before his rights were traded to the Lakers. He played collegiately at Arizona State, where he finished his career as the school's all-time leading scorer with 1,752 points. Scott was named First Team All-Pac 10 as a senior after averaging 21.6 points, 5.4 rebounds and 3.1 assists.

The native of Inglewood, Calif., has an equally impressive record off the court. His non-profit organization, The Byron Scott Children's Fund, has raised more than $6 million over the past decade, with the proceeds going to various children's charities. Scott continued to broaden his résumé during the 2003-04 season when he served as a studio analyst for ABC's NBA telecasts.

Scott and his wife, Anita, have three children, Thomas, LonDen and DaRon.

Kenny Gattison
Assistant Coach

Kenny Gattison enters his sixth season on the Hornets bench in 2008-09. He re-joined the Hornets organization in 2003-04 as an assistant coach after playing six seasons for the team from 1989 to 1995. When Byron Scott was named head coach in May 2004, Gattison was the first assistant coach added to his staff (the two were teammates with the Vancouver Grizzlies during the 1995-96 season).

Since retiring from the NBA as a player following the 1995-96 season, Gattison has built an impressive résumé as a coach. He spent two seasons as an assistant under Blaine Taylor at his alma mater of Old Dominion University and was also on the New Jersey Nets' bench as an assistant coach under John Calipari from 1996-98. In addition, Gattison has served as head coach for the Hornets' entry in the Vegas Summer League for the past three seasons.

Gattison enjoyed a nine-year career in the NBA before retiring after the 1995-96 season. He finished with career averages of 4.7 points and 7.9 rebounds with a .520 (1,536-2,956) career field goal percentage in 494 games. Gattison began his career in Phoenix after being drafted by the Suns in the third round (55th pick overall) of the 1986 NBA Draft. After averaging 5.2 points and 3.5 rebounds in 77 games as a rookie in 1986-87, Gattison tore the ACL in his left knee and missed the 1987-88 season. He played two games for the Suns in 1988-89 before signing in Europe.

The Hornets signed the 6-8 Gattison as a free agent on Dec. 2, 1989 after he began the season with the CBA's Quad City Thunder. He went on to play six years with the team, averaging 8.4 points and 5.0 rebounds in 390 games as a member of the Hornets. He shot .529 (1,297-2,454) from the field over his Hornets career, ranking him first in franchise history, while he ranks fifth all-time in blocks (283), fifth all-time in offensive rebounding (622) and fifth all-time in games played (390). Gattison's best season came as a Hornet when he averaged 12.7 ppg, 7.1 rpg, 1.6 apg and 0.8 bpg while playing in 82 games during the 1991-92 campaign.

The Vancouver Grizzlies selected Gattison in the first round (16th overall pick) of the 1995 Expansion Draft. He began the 1995-96 season with the Grizzlies, where he averaged 9.2 points and 4.6 rebounds, but was traded to Orlando along with a second round pick for Jeff Turner on Feb. 22. Gattison did not play in a game with the Magic and retired following the end of the season.

Gattison finished his career at ODU as one of the school's greatest athletes. He was named Sun Belt Conference Player of the Year as a senior and garnered All-Sun Belt honors twice. He finished his career as the conference's all-time leading rebounder and currently stands second in the league's history. At ODU, he ranks fifth in the career rebounding category. He averaged 13.3 ppg and 7.9 rpg during his four-year career and was named to the Sun Belt Conference All-Decade Team.

Gattison graduated from Old Dominion with a bachelor's degree in distributive education, specializing in personnel management. A native of Wilmington, N.C., Gattison and his wife, Harriet, have three sons, Kyle, Bryce and Grant and a daughter, Natasha.

Paul Pressey Assistant Coach

Paul Pressey enters his second season as assistant coach of the Hornets. He joined the Hornets as an assistant coach on July 1, 2007. He brought with him the experience of 26 seasons as a coach and player on the professional level.

Pressey's last coaching position was at the Boston Celtics, where he was an assistant coach for two seasons (2004-2006) and an advance scout for one season (2006-07). During his time in Boston, the Celtics compiled a 102-144 (.415) overall record and made the playoffs once.

Prior to working with the Celtics, Pressey spent four seasons (2000-2004) as an assistant coach for the Orlando Magic. The Richmond, Va. native spent six seasons as an assistant coach with the San Antonio Spurs prior to the Magic, helping the Spurs capture their first-ever NBA Championship in 1998-99.

Pressey enjoyed an 11-year NBA career as a player, appearing in 724 regular season games with Milwaukee and San Antonio. Selected 21st overall by the Milwaukee Bucks in the 1982 NBA Draft, Pressey averaged 10.6 points, 5.6 assists and 3.9 rebounds per game. His best season came in 1984-85 when he averaged 16.1 points, 6.8 assists and 5.4 rebounds per game and was named to the NBA All-Defensive Team as a member of the Bucks.

Prior to the 1992-93 season, Pressey was named an assistant coach for the Golden State Warriors, but after a rash of injuries he was forced back to the court and appeared in 18 games. He spent the entire 1993-94 season as an assistant coach with the Warriors.

Pressey began his collegiate career at Western Texas Junior College, leading his team to a 37-0 record and a JUCO National Title, before playing at the University of Tulsa. He graduated from Tulsa in 1982 with a degree in physical education. Pressey helped bring national recognition and the 1981 NIT Championship to The University of Tulsa, leading the Golden Hurricane to a 50-13 record in two seasons. Pressey earned All-America honors as a senior in the 1981-82 season and was named the MVC Player of the Year.

Pressey and his wife, Elizabeth, have four children, Ashley, Angela, Matthew and Phillip.

Charlie Parker
Assistant Coach

Charlie Parker enters his second season as assistant coach of the Hornets. He joined the Hornets as an assistant coach in 2006-07, adding the experience of over 30 seasons as a coach on the collegiate and professional level.

Parker's last coaching position was with the Dallas Mavericks, where he was an assistant coach for ten seasons (1995-2005) after eight years at Southern California.

Parker was head coach at USC in 1995-96 after six years as an assistant under George Raveling. He assumed the role of interim head coach Nov. 14, 1994, and finished out the 1994-95 season in that capacity.

Parker was head coach at Wayne State from 1982-88. During his tenure, he posted a record of 120-56 (.682) and established himself as the winningest coach in school history. Averaging 20 wins each season, the Tartars won the Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title three times. In addition, the 1985-86 squad finished with a record of 24-7, advancing to the NCAA Division II National Quarterfinals. In his last five seasons at Wayne State, all of Parker's teams finished in the top 20 in various Division II polls and made three tournament appearances. While at Wayne State, Parker was honored as the GLIAC Coach of the Year on two occasions (1984 and 1987) and was also heralded as the Michigan Coach of the Year in 1984. He was inducted into the Wayne State Athletic Hall of Fame in 2001.

Prior to his time at Wayne State, Parker spent six seasons as an assistant coach at Bowling Green. His coaching career began in 1972 at his alma mater, the University of Findlay (Ohio), as both an assistant basketball coach and head track/cross country coach. Parker received his master's degree in education at Bowling Green in 1974. Parker received an honorary doctorate from Findlay in 1995.

Parker graduated from Findlay in 1972 after earning a bachelor's degree in health and physical education and a minor in sociology. While an undergraduate, he had a decorated career in both basketball and track. He was elected to the school's Hall of Fame in 1989. He was elected into the Hancock County (Ohio) Sports Hall of Fame in April of 1998.

Parker and his wife, Lori, have a son, Christopher and a daughter Kendall. Parker has five other children: Sharmelle, Charles, Jr., Cameron, Sharee, and Lyndie.

Terry Kofler Athletic Trainer/Director of Team Travel

Terry Kofler returns for his 21st season with the Hornets in 2008-09, once again facing the formidable task of keeping the Hornets healthy for an entire year. As the team's athletic trainer, his responsibilities center on the day-to-day care, prevention, and treatment of the players' injuries. During his tenure, Kofler has provided a perfect example of durability, as he has missed only one of the 1,608 Hornets regular season games and has been at all 73 playoff games and all preseason games (home and away) since the club's inception in 1988. He is certified by the National Athletic Trainers' Association.

Also serving as the team's director of travel, Kofler is responsible for managing the Hornets' in-season road itinerary. He negotiates with and serves as the liaison to the team hotels in all 28 NBA road sites and is in charge of scheduling all practice sites and shootaround times for the club's 40-plus game road slate.

Kofler had the prestigious honor of serving as the team trainer for the Western Conference All-Stars during the 2007 All-Star Game in Las Vegas and the 2008 All-Star Game in New Orleans.

Prior to assuming his current position in the summer of 1988, Kofler had spent his entire career at Xavier University (Ohio). He attended the school as an undergraduate and upon his graduation in 1976, took over the position of head athletic trainer and equipment manager. Kofler held this position from 1976 to 1983, earning his master's degree in education along the way. After spending a year as assistant to the athletic director, Kofler was named assistant athletic director in 1984 and served the school in that capacity until he became the Hornets' trainer. As assistant AD, Kofler coordinated travel arrangements for 13 varsity sports, supervised the school's athletic facilities, administered several varsity sports programs and served as trainer for the men's basketball team.

Kofler is a past Secretary of the National Basketball Trainers Association, and was selected to be trainer for the NBA All-Star Game in Charlotte in 1991. The Cincinnati native has served as consulting trainer for Queen City Sports Medicine, Inc. in Charlotte and as an instructor in the education department of Xavier University (Ohio). He is also a past chairman of the Greater Cincinnati Athletic Trainers Association.

Kofler, 53, and his wife, Janet, reside in Harvey.

David Jovanovic Equipment Manager

David Jovanovic, a Hornets employee since their inaugural season in 1988, returns for his 21st season with the club in 2008-09.

His responsibilities as the team's equipment manager consist of ordering and maintaining all of the team's equipment and maintaining the Hornets locker room. At home games, he ensures the Hornets, as well as their opponents, have everything they need for game preparation. In addition, he travels with the team to all preseason, regular season and playoff games and can be found in his usual seat at the end of the bench.

"Big Shot," as he is known by the players and staff, also directs the team's extensive ball boy program.

Along with his daily responsibilities with the team, he has also assisted with the original 1988 CBA tryouts for the Hornets, the 1991 and 2008 NBA All-Star Games, training camp for the 1995 USA Women's Basketball Team that competed in Atlanta for the Summer Olympics and an exhibition game with the 1994 USA Men's Basketball Team that competed in the World Championships in Toronto as well as numerous NCAA Tournament Regionals and ACC Tournaments.

A native of Arlington, Va., Jovanovic attended Belmont Abbey College in Belmont, N.C., and earned his bachelor's degree in mathematics in 1988. He and his wife of 17 years, MaryEllen, have two daughters, Grace (14) and Abigail (12). An avid sports fan, he loves the NFL and NASCAR and enjoyed watching the 2008 Summer Olympics. He also enjoys spending time with his family.

Jack Manson Strength and Core Trainer

The 2008-09 season will be Jack Manson's sixth as the strength and core trainer for the Hornets. His duties include designing and implementing exercise and strength conditioning programs that help players achieve and maintain optimal fitness throughout the year. In addition, he is consulted for various injuries players may encounter during the season.

Manson has 20 years of experience as a certified physician assistant. He has worked in internal and primary care medicine, emergency medicine and occupational medicine. He practiced at Howard University and Washington Hospital Center in Washington, D.C. and Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans. Manson ran the human performance lab and administered personal training at Elmwood Fitness Center (New Orleans) from 2000-2003, where he worked with elite athletes and fitness expert Mackie Shilstone.

A native of Washington, D.C., Manson attended Mackin Catholic H.S. and grew up playing basketball with many of the great athletes from that area including Johnny Dawkins, Len Bias and Duane Ferrell. Manson received a bachelor's degree in physician assistantship from Howard University in 1986. He later went on to earn a masters degree in exercise physiology from Miami University (Ohio) in 1992.

Mark Cranston Director of Athlete Performance and Rehabilitation

Mark Cranston enters his third season with the Hornets in the full-time role of director of athletic performance and rehabilitation. His primary focus is the rehabilitation and prevention of players' injuries. He assists with the daily care of the team's health, and monitors each player's individual exercise program. Cranston is a licensed physical therapist and is certified by the National Athletic Trainers Association as an athletic trainer. In addition, he has professional credentials from the National Strength Coaches Association as a certified strength coach as well as the National Academy of Sports Medicine as a performance enhancement specialist and corrective exercise specialist.

Prior to joining the Hornets, Cranston was a clinical director of sports medicine, physical therapy and athletic training in Oklahoma City, Okla. He has an extensive resume that covers 27 years of physical therapy and athletic training practice.

He was awarded the 1992 Nuprin Comeback Award for rehabilitation of Olympic gold-medalist Shannon Miller and received the 1995 Distinguished Alumni Award from Wichita State University Department of Physical Therapy.

He previously held faculty appointments at two universities including the University of Oklahoma Department of Physical Therapy from 1985-1989.

Cranston received his bachelor's degree in physical therapy from Wichita State University and his masters of public health from the University of Oklahoma. Cranston and his wife, Carol, have three daughters, Cara, Elise and Brittany. Brittany and Elise also work for the Hornets.

Irving Roland Video Coordinator

Irving Roland enters his fourth season with the Hornets, his third as video coordinator. He spent the 2005-06 season working as assistant video coordinator.

Roland's responsibilities include advance scouting of all opponents, recording games for scouting purposes, providing scouting and specialty tapes for the coaches and players, and coordinating and compiling statistical information for the entire basketball staff and players.

Roland came to the Hornets after working as an intern for the Boston Celtics through the 2004-05 season. In Boston, his duties included recording NBA, college and international games for scouting purposes. Additionally, he was responsible for editing games for all opponents and preparing individual player edits of upcoming opponents.

A native of Midwest City, Okla., Roland played basketball at Southwestern Oklahoma State University (Weatherford, Okla.) for two seasons after transferring from Carl Albert State College.

During his junior season, he ranked 23rd in the nation in three-point percentage among Division II athletes. He also ranked in the top five in both free throw and three-point percentage in the Lone Star Conference and was named honorable mention All-LSC.

Brian Hagen
Assistant to The General Manager/Director of Scouting

Brian Hagen begins his sixth season with the Hornets, his third as assistant to the general manager and second as director of scouting. He is responsible for evaluating and studying current NBA rosters, heading special research projects aimed at upgrading the team's roster, and evaluating college prospects.

For three seasons he served as video coordinator, where he was responsible for compiling video and statistical information used by Hornets coaches and players.

Hagen came to the Hornets after spending the 2002-03 season as an assistant coach at Texas A&M-Corpus Christi, where he was involved in every aspect of the program (including on-the-court instruction, off-the-court preparation, and recruiting).

Hagen started his career under former Hornets head coach Tim Floyd as an undergraduate assistant at Iowa State University (1996-97 and 1997-98). Hagen remained with the Cyclones under head coach Larry Eustachy for two more seasons, during which the team won the Big 12 regular season championship and the Big 12 tournament en route to advancing to the Elite Eight in 2000.

Following his time at Iowa State, Hagen joined the Chicago Bulls in 2000-01 as a special assistant to the head coach, where he broke down game film and handled other various duties as assigned by the coaching staff. In 2001-02, Hagen assumed the role of team leader of basketball operations for the Chicago Bulls Training Academy. There, he administered over 100 Bulls basketball camps throughout the Chicagoland area, gave private lessons to Chicago youth at the Academy and administered the Junior Bulls program.

Hagen graduated from Iowa State with a degree in management information systems in 2000. He and his wife, Jamie, live in New Orleans.

Andrew Loomis
Director of Basketball Administration and Player Development

Andrew Loomis begins his seventh season with the Hornets, his fifth as director of basketball administration and second as director of player development. He is responsible for researching and compiling statistical information on prospective players, evaluating salary cap implications for potential trades, ensuring compliance of the NBA's Collective Bargaining Agreement and assisting with the implementation of player development initiatives and community relations activities.

Prior to joining the Hornets, he interned for the Orlando Magic's media relations department. He contributed to the production and development of Magic Magazine, created media analysis reports and worked on the media relations game night staff throughout the internship.

Loomis, a 2002 graduate of Tulane University, spent four years working for the Green Wave men's basketball program. In addition, while working toward his bachelor's degree in English, he completed internships at Fox Sports Net in Los Angeles and Madison Square Garden.

In New Orleans, Loomis worked at several national events held in the city, including Super Bowl XXXVI and the 1999 and 2001 NCAA Basketball Tournaments.

In his spare time, he enjoys playing golf and traveling. He currently resides in New Orleans with his wife, Morgan.
