VINCE CARTER TOPS IN CRUNCH TIME

The Crunch Time Stat was designed by the NBA to provide an innovative way to measure "Crunch Time" performances — players who step up when the game is on the line! Crunch Time kicks in during the last two minutes and all overtime periods. Here's the formula: (PTS + REB + AST + STL + BLK) - ((FGA - FGM) + (FTA - FTM) + TO) + 4 points if their team wins. If the point differential of the game is greater than 15 points at the two-minute mark, only the losing team's players are eligible to earn Crunch Time points. Vince Carter was tops in 2005-06 succeeding Dwayne Wade. Kevin Garnett was the 2002-03 victor and Michael Redd in 2003-04.

BOSTON FIRST TO AVERAGE 100 POINTS
 The Boston Celtics averaged 101.4 points in 1954-55 to become the first team ever to average 100 points a game. The feat coincided with the introduction of the 24-second clock.

PHIL JACKSON COACHED NBA AND CBA CHAMPIONS
 Phil Jackson won coaching titles in two leagues, the NBA at Chicago and Los Angeles Lakers and with Albany in the Continental League.

ALL-TIME NBA DRAFT PICKS
 In the early days of the National Basketball Association, the NBA Draft lasted as long as teams wished, ending only when every team finally stopped picking players. The draft lasted upwards of 20 rounds through 1973 before the NBA adopted a 10-round format in 1974. It was reduced to seven rounds in 1985. It was again trimmed back in 1988 to three rounds before settling at its current two-round format a year later. Through 1965, teams were allowed to take advantage of the popularity of college stars in their region by forfeiting their first-round pick and selecting a "territorial pick" prior to the start of the draft. These territorial picks, along with every other player ever drafted by an NBA team, are now available on NBA Media Central.

LARRY BIRD DISTINCTION
 Larry Bird is the only player in league history to finish in the Top 10 in both Rebounding and Three-Point Shooting in the same season. He did it three times in 1979-80, 1984-85 and 1985-86.

MARION TIPS IN INSIDE PRESENCE

Inside presence is an important statistic. By adding dunks, tip-ins, lay-ups, finger rolls, rebounds, and blocked shots we can tell which players have the most success patrolling the point on both ends of the floor. Under a system devised by Adam Ross, Shawn Marion was first. To qualify a player has to hit at least 50 dunks or one block per game. Add totals in each of the 6 categories and divide by the number of games played to get a player's figures.

DISTANCE OF 2005-06 FIELD GOALS

This unique chart shows the distance of each player's field goals in the 2005-06 season. It starts off with dunks, lay-ups, finger rolls and tip-ins. It then measures each field goal from one foot to 54 feet and indicates how many goals he scored at that distance. In the next to last column all field goals over 29 feet are shown with their longest distances adjacent. The last column is total field goals for the season.

GAME BY GAME PLUS/MINUS WON-LOST RECORDS 2005-06

Plus/Minus stats are certainly becoming more in vogue among NBA insiders, but one drawback is that they don't represent consistency very well. A player could be +25 one night, and then follow up with -5, -7, -3 scores in the next three games and still show a healthy +10 overall net. Another way to look at how the team fares with the player on court is by assigning a "Win" to any game where the team was on the positive side of the +/- ledger with the player, and a "Loss" for any game with a negative +/- score. 82games.com revised these numbers to reflect our new policy of "continuation" accounting of on court events. Using this metric, here's the Regular Season leaders in plus/minus W-L percentage:

It's no surprise that the leading player would come from the team with the best record, and it's Rasheed Wallace of the Detroit Pistons who edges out MVP types like Duncan, Nowitzki and Billups for the honor. There's no doubt these WL records are biased in favor of players on very good teams, but that should not detract from players who rank highly and they should be commended for their night in, night out effort. The top WL player on a team with an overall losing record? That would be Jackie Butler, who posted a remarkable 34-19 (64%) mark for a Knicks team that finished at 23-59!

18 TEAMS USE AMNESTY BONANZA

Eighteen teams used the amnesty clause in 2005 to save more than $212 million in future tax payments. Teams whose payrolls exceed $61.7 million for the 2005-06 season had to pay a dollar-for-dollar tax on the overage. Under the terms of the NBA rule, players who were waived will still be paid by their former teams, but the payments will be deducted from the luxury tax. A player can't be re-signed until his contract has expired. Players were able to sign with other clubs after a 48-hour waiver period had expired. Many of them signed with other teams, some players retired and others hadn't been signed at this writing.

Here are the 18 players showing the team, the player and how much money the club saved by the money they owed the player. Twelve teams didn't utilize the opportunity.

DAVE COWENS LAST NBA PLAYER COACH

Dave Cowens was the last player coach in the NBA who played an appreciable amount of games. Dave played 68 games in 1978-79 after succeeding Tom Sanders as the coach of the Boston Celtics. He compiled a 27-41 record, but was not rehired for the next season, the job going to Bill Fitch. Lenny Wilkens was the playing coach at Seattle in 1971-72 when he played 80 games and his team's record was 42-18 after he succeeded Bob Hopkins. Some other playing coaches were Dave DeBusschere at Detroit for three seasons; Kevin Loughery at Philadelphia for one season; Carl Braun at New York and Alex Hannum at St. Louis just to name a few.

82GAMES.COM GARBAGE TIME PLAYER STATS

(NBA 2005-06 Regular Season)

There are times when an NBA game seems to be over even though there may be more than a few minutes left on the clock. Garbage Time is upon us, and for most coaches it's an opportunity to trot out the tail end of the twelve man roster and divvy up some minutes to the lesser players who battle hard during practice. It's also frequently a time for rookies to get an extended stretch of playing time.

Of course, when the outcome of a game is, for all intents and purposes, finalized there's a good chance that the play becomes in some cases a matter of padding one's stats. Do players look to post a few extra numbers on the stat sheet when the defenses are relaxed and the opposition may be going through the motions? 82games.com elected to use the following definition of "garbage time" moments: 4th quarter and overtime where either team has a lead of 10 points plus one point for each minute remaining. It's easier to see this in table form —

Minimum lead to qualify as "garbage time"

| | | | | | | | | | | | | |
|------------|-----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|----|
| Min. Left | 1 | 2 | 3 | 4 | 5 | 6 | 7 | 8 | 9 | 10 | 11 | 12 |
| Lead (Pts) | 10+ | 11 | 12 | 13 | 14 | 15 | 16 | 17 | 18 | 19 | 20 | 21 |

It could be argued certainly that these thresholds are wrong, that teams have indeed clawed their way back from being 15 points down with six minutes to go. We're pretty comfortable thinking this is a reasonable definition when you consider that if the game tightens up it will no longer be judged as garbage time (and the starters are all rushed back into the game!)

The table below shows various accumulated stats for the 2005-06 regular season, under our garbage time filter. We created a "Stats Padding" number that is Points + Rebounds + Assists + Blocks + Steals.

Now, we don't intend for these numbers to be used to denigrate players. After all, there's nothing wrong with doing well in minutes that are "less than crucial" and we respect players who still play hard and give the fans their money's worth after the game is out of reach. So, before you start trash talking about how Bryant, Marion and Gasol are stockpiling numbers for All-Star/MVP claims, you would be wise to remember that they put up similar levels of productivity throughout the full 48 minutes!

On the other hand, this may be a useful tool for evaluating some of the bench players - break out their stats into "garbage time" and non-garbage time categories and then judge them by the performance in the minutes that really mattered.
