2009 DRAFT LOTTERY GUIDE

DRAFT LOTTERY

MAY 19, 2009

CHECK THIS OUT

The Warriors have owned the #7 overall selection when entering the NBA Lottery on one prior occasion -- 1993. The result? Golden State moved up four spots to #3.

NBA DRAFT LOTTERY 2009: WHAT WILL HAPPEN

The 2009 NBA Draft Lottery, where ping-pong balls supplant basketballs as the tools of determining supremacy, will be held on Tuesday, May 19, at the NBA Entertainment Studios in Secaucus, New Jersey.

The 24th annual edition of the NBA Draft Lottery will determine the order of selection for the first 14 picks of 2009 NBA Draft.

Fourteen ping-pong balls numbered 1 through 14 will be placed in a drum. There are 1,001 possible combinations when four balls are drawn out of 14, without regard to their order of selection. Prior to the Lottery, 1,000 combinations will be assigned to the 14 participating Lottery teams by a computer.

The Sacramento Kings finished the season with the NBA's worst record (17-65), so they will be assigned 250 combinations. The Phoenix Suns, the best team in the lottery at 46-36, will have five combinations out of 1,000. The Warriors, with a record of 29-53, will have 43 combinations out of 1,000.

Four balls will be drawn to the top to determine a four-digit combination. The team that has been assigned that combination will receive the number one pick. The four balls are placed back in the drum and the process is repeated to determine the number two and three picks. (Note: If the one unassigned combination is drawn, the balls are drawn to the top again.)

The order of selection for the teams that do not win one of the top three picks will be determined by inverse order of their regular season record. Thus, Sacramento can pick no lower than fourth, Washington (19-63) no lower than fifth and the L.A. Clippers (19-63) no lower than sixth. In the event that Golden State does not win one of the first three picks in the Lottery, the Warriors will pick no higher than 7th and no lower than the 10th selection in the 2009 NBA Draft. The actual Lottery procedure will take place in a separate room prior to the national broadcast with NBA officials and representatives of the participating teams and the accounting firm of Ernst & Young in attendance. General Manager Larry Riley will represent the Warriors on stage.

Following the drawing, team logo cards will be inserted into envelopes marked 1 through 14 by an Ernst & Young representative. These envelopes then will be sealed and brought on-stage, where the announcement of the Lottery results will be made by NBA Deputy Commissioner Adam Silver. A second representative from each participating team will be seated on-stage. Neither the Deputy Commissioner nor the team representatives will be informed of the Lottery results prior to the opening of the envelopes.

The team whose logo is in the last envelope opened will pick first in NBA Draft 2009, to be held on Thursday, June 25, at The Theater at Madison Square Garden in New York City.

EVOLUTION OF THE NBA LOTTERY

The NBA Board of Governors, meeting in Salt Lake City in June of 1984, voted to adopt a lottery system among the non-playoff teams to determine their order of selection in the first round of the NBA Draft beginning in 1985.

From 1966 through 1984, the teams that finished with the worst records in each conference participated in a coin flip to determine which team would draft first. The remaining teams picked in inverse order of their won-lost records. Under the system adopted prior to the 1985 NBA Draft, the NBA Lottery determines the order of selection for the non-playoff teams (or the teams holding their picks through trades) for the first round only. Teams pick in inverse order of their records in the second round (or, prior to the draft being reduced to two rounds in 1989, in all succeeding rounds).

Under a procedural change adopted by the Board of Governors in April of 1986, the Lottery determines the order of selection for the first three teams only. The remaining non-playoff teams select in inverse order of their regular season records. Therefore, the team with the worst record in the league is assured of picking no worse than fourth, the team with the second-worst record no worse than fifth and so on.

In a further refinement in October of 1989, the Board of Governors adopted a weighted system beginning with the 1990 NBA Draft Lottery, which included 11 teams due to expansion. The team with the worst record during the regular season received 11 chances at the top pick (out of a total of 66), the second-worst team got 10 chances and the team with the best record among the non-playoff clubs got one chance.

The Board of Governors approved a modification of the Lottery system in November of 1993 that, effective with the 1994 NBA Draft Lottery, increased the chances of the teams with the worst records in the league winning one of the top three picks in the draft while decreasing the lottery chances of the teams with the best records. The new system increased the chances of the team with the worst record drawing the first pick in the draft from 16.7 percent to 25 percent, while decreasing the chances of the team with the best record among lottery teams from 1.5 percent to 0.5 percent.

Under the system, 14 ping pong balls numbered 1 through 14 are placed in a drum. There are 1,001 possible combinations when four balls are drawn out of 14, without regard to their order of selection. Prior to the Lottery, 1,000 combinations are assigned to the Lottery teams based on their order of finish during the regular season. Four balls are drawn to the top to determine a four-digit combination. The team that has been assigned that combination will receive the number one pick. The four balls are placed back in the drum and the process is repeated to determine the number two and three picks. (Note: If the one unassigned combination is drawn, the balls are drawn to the top again.)

In October of 1995, the Board of Governors increased the number of teams participating in the Lottery from 11 to 13 to account for the addition of expansion teams Toronto and Vancouver. Starting in 1996, the team with the worst record in the Lottery continued to have a 25% chance of winning the first pick, teams two through six have slightly fewer chances, team seven has the same number of chances and teams eight through 12 have slightly more chances. The number of chances for team 13 did not change.

The 2004 NBA Draft Lottery increased to 14 teams with the addition of the Charlotte Bobcats. The Bobcats, as part of their expansion agreement were locked into the fourth position in the 2004 Draft and therefore did not have a chance to receive other picks in the Lottery.

The 2009 NBA Draft Lottery decides picks one through 14 and the chances are below for each teams odds to receive the number one selection in the 2009 NBA Draft.

	Chances
Team 1:	250
Team 2:	178
Team 3:	177
Team 4:	119
Team 5:	76
Team 6:	75
Team 7:	43
Team 8:	28
Team 9:	17
Team 10:	10
Team 11:	9
Team 12:	7
Team 13:	6
Team 14:	5

Note: Tied teams split the number of chances and a blind draw determines which team receives an extra chance if the combined number of chances can not be split evenly.

WARRIORS UPCOMING DRAFT PICK STATUS

Here is a look at the Warriors current status in the next three NBA Drafts:

2009 NBA DRAFT

First Round (1): Warriors have their own first round pick.

Second Round (0): Warriors do not have a second round pick (traded to Phoenix in exchange for Zarko Cabarkapa on 1/3/05; pick subsequently traded to San Antonio).

2010 NBA DRAFT

First Round (1): Warriors have their own first round pick.

Second Round (1): Warriors have their own second round pick.

2011 NBA DRAFT

First Round (1/0): Warriors have their own first round pick if #1-14. If pick is #15-30, pick belongs to New Jersey (in exchange for Marcus Williams on 7/22/08).

Second Round (1): Warriors have their own second round pick

WARRIORS HISTORY IN THE LOTTERY

The Golden State Warriors have previously been involved in the NBA lottery 17 times in the 24 years since the lottery's inception in 1985. The Warriors have "moved up" in the draft via the lottery on three occasions, "dropped down" seven times and held their ground seven times (including each of last five times) during the annual ping-pong ball drop. Here is a look at how the club has fared in its 17 lottery experiences, including its pre-lottery draft position (based on previous year's record), eventual draft position and selection:

*Teams that finished the regular season with identical records will select in the second round in reverse of the order in which they select in the first round. With respect to the ties between the Los Angeles Clippers and Washington (32 and 33); Memphis and Minnesota (35 and 36); and New Jersey and Milwaukee (40 and 41); since the order of selection in the first round for each set of teams may change based on the results of the Draft Lottery, the order of selection in the second round cannot be determined until after the Draft Lottery is conducted (on May 19, 2009).

LOTTERY RESULTS CHART

Since the NBA Lottery moved to its current weighted system in 1994, five teams slotted seventh-or-lower prior to the lottery have moved up into the top three, most recently Chicago (9th) moved up to first overall in 2008. Since 1994, there have been two occasions when the team slotted to pick seventh overall moved up to pick first overall, most recently Portland in 2007.

The chart below reveals the movement of each pre-lottery slotted position (left hand side) in the NBA Lottery since 1985, with the post-lottery results (up, down or no movement) detailed in each respective box.

1	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The number ONE pre-lottery slotted team has only retained its position three times, last in 2004 (Orlando). • Has moved down to the 2nd overall pick five times, last in 2008 (Miami). • Has moved down to the 3rd overall pick six times, last in 2003 (Denver). • Has moved down to the 4th overall pick eight times, last in 2007 (Memphis). • Has moved down to the 5th overall pick once, in 1986 (New York). • Has moved down to the 7th overall pick once, in 1985 (Golden State).
