Mr. Simon is married and has seven children.

In Memoriam:

On September 16, 2009, the State of Indiana, the City of Indianapolis and the Indiana Pacers lost one of its greatest leaders when Pacers co-owner Melvin Simon passed away. Mr. Simon was not only a leader in the business community but a visionary for his adopted hometown and one of Indiana’s philanthropic giants. As Pacers President of Basketball Operations Larry Bird said, “He is a true legend to this city, not only for the visible things that everyone sees each day, but because he was a man who cared about people. He is one of this country’s greatest success stories, a man who is a true example of the American Dream. As an owner of the Pacers, he was a joy to work for and to work with. But he wasn’t only an owner, he was the biggest and best Pacers fan.” The Pacers’ family will miss him.
LARRY BIRD
PRESIDENT/BASKETBALL OPERATIONS

As a player, Larry Bird was driven to win. As a coach, he was driven to win. Now in his role as the Indiana Pacers’ President of Basketball Operations, Bird’s steering wheel remains firmly in place.

When Bird took the helm full time in the spring of 2008 after Donnie Walsh left for the New York Knicks, change was in the air. It started with the June, 2008 NBA draft when Bird orchestrated a two trade that brought in seven new players, including first-round draft picks Brandon Rush and Roy Hibbert. It continued in the summer of 2009 with the draft that brought former College Player of the Year Tyler Hansbrough (13th pick from North Carolina) and the signing of free agents Dahntay Jones, Earl Watson and Solomon Jones. The Pacers have missed the playoffs three straight years – after a run of nine straight and 16 of 17 years in the postseason – and the highly competitive Bird wants a return . . . and more.

“The first goal is to get back in the playoffs and you do that by getting a core of players to build around,” said Bird. “We’ve got good, young players and an All-Star in Danny Granger who should all get better. It will take time, I know it’s going to be tough. I think I know how to do most of it. Hopefully, we can get back to the NBA Finals again. That’s our goal. Right now, it’s not to win a championship, but to get to the Finals and give ourselves an opportunity to win.”

Bird certainly knows how to win with a resume to back it up. He was an Indiana All-Star after playing at Springs Valley High School. He played collegiately at Indiana State and in his senior year, led the Sycamores to an undefeated season and the NCAA championship game before losing to Magic Johnson and Michigan State. That season, Bird was the College Player of the Year. His storied success led to him being named one of Indiana’s 50 Greatest Basketball Players in 1999.

Then, in 13 seasons as a professional with Boston, he was named the NBA’s 1980 Rookie of the Year; was a 12-time NBA All-Star; three-time NBA MVP; helped lead the Celtics to three world championships, winning two NBA Finals MVP awards; won an Olympic gold medal in 1992 as part of the United States’ “Dream Team”; was named one of the NBA’s 50 Greatest Players in 1996; and was inducted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame in 1998.

From there, his next challenge was coaching. He answered that challenge as well. In three seasons with the Pacers, he led them to a 147-67 record, winning Coach of the Year honors in 1998 and leading the team to its first-ever NBA Finals appearance in 2000. The Pacers reached the Conference Finals in all three of his seasons, winning two Central Division championships and in 1998, Bird earned Eastern Conference All-Star coaching honors. He returned to the franchise July 11, 2003, in his current role, driven to win again. “I’m in this to win championships and that’s the bottom line.”

In his role with the Pacers, Bird oversees the basketball operations of the franchise, from the coaches to budgeting to player personnel to scouting to contract negotiations to the training staff.

Walsh, the former Pacers CEO/President said, “I think this is going to be the beginning of a new era in Pacers basketball. I think he is the perfect person to be here in Indiana, to take this team forward for the long haul. It has always been my dream, that when I gave up my job, that there’s a guy in place who can take this franchise and keep it at a very high level. And I think Larry can do that.”

Added Bird, “This is my home state, this is the place I wanted to do it. I just want to win basketball games. I want to help the Pacers get to the places they’ve never been before.”

From the day he stepped into the front office, Bird seemed to have an impact. Together with Walsh, they decided in the summer of 2003 to not have Coach Isiah Thomas return for the final year of his contract. They tapped Rick Carlisle to replace Thomas. Carlisle, a former assistant with Bird when he was coach of the Pacers, had led Detroit to two 50-win seasons, two Central Division championships and earned a Coach of the Year honor in 2002 before being fired by the Pistons. He was Bird’s obvious, and first, choice to step in. It was his first major move.

The result was a milestone season for the Pacers in 2003-04. They set franchise records for victories (61), winning percentage (.744), road victories in their NBA history (27) and won the Central Division Championship. They also reached the Eastern Conference Finals before bowing to eventual World Champion Detroit, four games to two. In 2004-05, the Pacers returned to the playoffs and reached the Eastern Conference Semifinals. They had a 44-38 record despite a season where they lost players for 309 games due to injury or illness and another 126 due to suspension.

Then in 2005-06, the Pacers finished with a 41-41 record, despite having 236 games lost due to injury, including starters Jermaine O’Neal (31 games) and Jamaal Tinsley (40 games). Still, they made the playoffs again.

Following the 2006-07 season, Carlisle and the Pacers agreed to part ways after the team missed the playoffs for the first time in 10 years. Bird quietly conducted his coaching search, eventually landing a proven winner, Jim O’Brien, who met the standards Bird was looking for.

“We have a vision of where we want this team to go, from how we are going to practice, to how we are going to play and the style we’re going to play,” said Bird. “We are on the same page and I feel Jim is the guy who will take us to the next level. The direction I want to go, he’s the guy that’s going to get us there.”

Despite setbacks, the Pacers didn’t step back, they have looked ahead. That’s Bird’s way.

Stepping into a situation and making the most of it isn’t new to Bird. In his first year as coach, he took over a veteran team that had missed the playoffs the previous season. For the third time in the previous five seasons, the Pacers reached Game 7 of the Eastern Conference Finals, this time extending the World Champion Chicago Bulls. Coming into the playoffs, the Pacers not only made the NBA pay attention, they made franchise history at the time. They had 58 victories, the most since joining the NBA in 1976; their .707 winning percentage was the best in the Pacers’ history, including their storied ABA days; they were 26-15 on the road, a franchise NBA best, and had the best road record of any Eastern Conference team. The Pacers amazingly didn’t lose two straight games in the regular season after December 10, and through the All-Star break, the Pacers had the best record in the East, thus earning Bird All-Star coaching honors.

The next season, the Pacers won the Central Division and reached the Eastern Conference Finals. In 2000, there was another Central Division championship and the trip to the NBA Finals.

Bird then, as he promised at the beginning, stepped away from coaching after three seasons. Three years later, Walsh was fired again and Bird came back home again to Indiana.

Bird is married to Dinah. He has three children, Corrie, Connor and Mariah. He is an avid golfer and outdoorsman, while enjoying country music and auto racing.

He spent nine years at Jarden and most recently served as Senior Vice President and Chief Financial Officer.

Bower started his career in 1980 with Schneider & Shuster, a locally based public accounting firm in Denver, Colo. After five years in Denver, he returned to Indiana where he continued his career in public accounting with Price Waterhouse.

Bower, 51, was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., and grew up in South Bend, Ind. He attended Bentley College in Waltham, Mass., on a basketball scholarship and graduated with a BS in accounting. He is married to Maureen and they have three children, Erin, Megan and Kevin.

He is on the Board of the Pacers Foundation; and also serves on the Board of Directors of the St. Vincent Foundation. In his spare time, he is a volunteer basketball coach and enjoys golf and traveling.

KELLY KRAUSKOPF
CHIEF OPERATING OFFICER AND GENERAL MANAGER

Kelly Krauskopf is in her 10th season as the Indiana Fever’s Chief Operating Officer and her sixth as the team’s General Manager. The highest-ranking female sports administrator in Indianapolis, she has been the Fever’s chief executive since the franchise was founded in 1999.

Since the team was established, Krauskopf has been the guiding force of the Fever from building the team roster to building a fan base for Indiana’s Women’s National Basketball Association franchise. In her role with the Fever, Krauskopf oversees all aspects of the team’s operation.

Since moving to Indianapolis and beginning the task of building a WNBA franchise, Krauskopf has engineered numerous player moves enabling the Fever, to improve the team and complete its finest season in 2009. The Fever carried the best record in the WNBA throughout the regular season en route to the club’s first regular-season conference title and its fifth consecutive playoff appearance. The 2009 campaign eclipsed the Fever’s previous best seasons with identical 21-13 records in 2005, 2006 and 2007. Krauskopf has guided the franchise to six playoff berths in its first 10 seasons.

The Krauskopf-built Fever is perhaps the most stable the franchise has ever been, led by a solid core of returning starters that include All-Stars Tamika Catchings, Katie Douglas and Tammy Sutton-Brown, Australian Olympian Tully Bevilaqua and 2008 WNBA Most Improved Player Ebony Hoffman.

Within the past five years, Krauskopf’s key trades and free agent acquisitions have re-built the Fever roster. During the 2005-06 winter, in particular, Krauskopf was the league’s most active GM, re-tooling the Fever roster with a pair of trades and a slew of free agent acquisitions that netted three new starters.

Besides a February 2008 deal to land Douglas, other moves in recent years resulted in the signing of veteran centers Natalie Williams and Yolanda Griffith, and former point guard Kelly Miller. A midseason move during the 2002 campaign brought veteran guard Coquese Washington to the Fever to ignite a late run to the franchise’s first appearance in the WNBA Playoffs.

The cornerstone of the franchise was solidified by the draft selection of Catchings in the 2001 WNBA Draft. The third overall selection in the 2001 Draft and a 2004 and 2008 U.S. Olympian, Catchings was named Rookie of the Year in 2002 and Defensive Player of the Year in 2005 and 2006. She is a six-time WNBA All-Star and a six-time All-WNBA selection who has finished second or third in MVP balloting four times.

Bevilaqua, a veteran point guard from Australia who helped Seattle to win the WNBA title in 2004, was added via free agency in January 2005 to steady the unit and direct the franchise through what would become its finest seasons.

Krauskopf also serves on USA Basketball’s Women’s Senior National Team Committee, helping to select from WNBA players to develop U.S. National Team rosters. Krauskopf has been a committee member since 2000, helping select the gold-medal winning roster for the 2004 Summer Olympics in Athens, and again for Beijing in 2008.

Krauskopf has been in the forefront of the development of the WNBA. In September 1996, she was named the WNBA’s first Director of Basketball Operations. In that role, she was involved in all phases of the league’s start-up operation and initiatives. She also developed the league’s first set of playing rules, officiating policies, scheduling and other league standards, while working daily with WNBA team general managers and operations personnel.

Before joining the WNBA, Krauskopf was the Managing Director of League Development for Media Sports Partnership, Limited, in Dallas, Tex. From 1990 to 1994, she was Assistant Commissioner for the Southwest Conference. In addition to overseeing league marketing, she was the chief administrator for all eight women’s sports programs in the conference. She served from 1986 to 1990 as Texas A&M’s Assistant Athletic Director for Women’s Sports/Marketing.

Krauskopf has served on committees for the Women’s Sports Foundation; the Women’s Basketball Coaches Association; Citizenship for Sports Alliance, and Texas A&M’s Lettermen’s Association Board of Directors. She currently serves on the Indiana Sports Corporation Presidents Council.

A 1983 graduate of Texas A&M University with a bachelor of arts degree in journalism, she was a three-year letterwinner in basketball for the Lady Aggies after transferring from Stephen F. Austin University, where she played her freshman year under legendary coach Sue Gunter.

INDIANA PACEMATES

Since the Indiana Pacers first hit the hardwood in 1967, the Indiana Pacemates have been right there with them! Originally known as the Marathon Scoreboard Girls and then the Paul Harris Pacerettes in the ABA, the squad presented fashion shows during selected timeouts and halftime. After several years, the squad evolved into an entertainment entity of the franchise during the 1972-73 season and became known as the Indiana Pacemates. The Pacemates currently act as goodwill ambassadors to the community by making numerous appearances throughout the year for corporate, private, civic and charitable events on behalf of the Indiana Pacers.

The Pacemates' program continued into the 1976-77 season, when the Pacers entered the National Basketball Association. A dramatic new dimension was added to the Pacemates' program when they were heralded as the first professional dance/cheerleading squad in the NBA.

Creatively, the Pacemates merged the magic of dance and the excitement of cheerleading into a kaleidoscope of entertainment. So innovative and organized was the Pacemates' program that similar groups began to appear with other teams. Squads such as the Los Angeles Laker Girls, Chicago Luvabulls and the New Jersey Nets' Cheerleaders could now be found in NBA programs throughout the country. However, it was the Pacers’ Pacemates that were the trendsetters.

The Pacemates’ excellent reputation for entertainment came to the attention of the NBA front office in New York City, which extended an invitation to the squad to perform at the NBA All-Star Game. This was the first time in NBA history that an invitation was extended to a professional cheerleading squad. The Pacemates continued to set the trend as they were also the very first NBA dance team to be invited to perform for U.S. and NATO troops stationed overseas on the Armed Forces Entertainment Tour in 2004 and 2005. In the summer of 2009, the Pacemates were invited to China by the NBA to participate in a 14-day tour with the Jam Van Tour.

As the Pacers continue to succeed so does the Pacemates’ program, as they continue their tradition of excellence in entertainment and commitment to the community.
