★1994 — East 127, West 118 at the Target Center (Minneapolis) — The Chicago Bulls' Scottie Pippen, playing without Michael Jordan, affirmed his place among the league's elite when his 29 points, 11 rebounds, and four steals led the East to victory. Pippen dazzled a capacity crowd of 17,096, earning unanimous selection as the game's Most Valuable Player. Pippen's 9-for-15 shooting night included 5-of-9 accuracy from three-point range, and finished one three-pointer shy of the All-Star record of six threes in a game, set by Mark Price in 1993. The East's 10-for-24 performance from long range set records for both makes and attempts in an All-Star Game. Price and Patrick Ewing added 20 points each for the East squad, while B. J. Armstrong and Dominique Wilkins tallied 11 points apiece. Hakeem Olajuwon and David Robinson starred for the West with 19 points each. Shawn Kemp had a game-high 12 rebounds, and John Stockton led all players with 10 assists.
